

Cultures of Rejection in the COVID-19 Crisis [CuRe-COV] (additional Corona-related funding)

Initiative: Herausforderungen für Europa

Bewilligung: 27.01.2021

Laufzeit: 5 Monate

How does the COVID-19 crisis affect cultures of rejection? Building on findings from the CuRe project, the project team analyses the transformation and reinforcement of previously existing elements of cultures of rejection, and investigates emerging new ones in relation to the pandemic and its political management. Through an analysis of digital environments in five countries, the applicants identify pressing challenges arising from the rejection of political and scientific authorities, contribute to a deeper understanding of popular resistance to anti-pandemic measures, and develop suggestions for dealing with the threats to social cohesion and the European project they entail.

Projektbeteiligte

Prof. Dr. Manuela Bojadzijev

Humboldt-Universität Berlin
Philosophische Fakultät
Institut für Europäische Ethnologie
Berlin

Prof. Dr. Stefan Jonsson

Linköping University
Faculty of Arts and Sciences
Department of Social and Welfare Studies
Norrköping
Schweden

Prof. Dr. Birgit Sauer

Universität Wien
Institut für Politikwissenschaft
Wien
Österreich